This forenoon, and iong into the afternoon, the popular Admiral passed in review at the head of a mighty host and received the homage and manifestations of love and admiration which are his, "by right of conquest," but perhaps more nearly by right of diplomacy, cordiality and human sympathy in time of peace. The navy's third Admiral saw the city hero-mad yesterday at the naval parade, but when he passed down the boulevard riding ahead of the men who made the victory of Manils Bay possible and the nation glorious he received such an ovation as no man ever had before. Millions of voices shouted for him and millions of hands applaud. ed him. Surely the homecoming of the sea fighter is unprecedented in history.

Exceeding Honors to Caesar. None of the Caesars of ancient Rome ould have had such a greeting. Even with the coming of the dawn the crowds began to gather. The flags of all nations of the earth ficated from tall towers, and flanked the walls of buildings. Shields and portraits of Dewcy and the Olympia, and Farragut, and Porter, and Schley were displayed everywhere, and there were many varied, but all crimson, pictures, of the battle of

Your countrymen are interested in and know every detail of your life. Your joys, your sorrows are theirs. They have traced your ancestry and your character and deeds from the cradie rocked by the fond mother to the Olympia rocked by the rolling waves of the mighty deep. They listened with delight to the story of the fighting Deweys bravely doing their duty in every war of their country for 256 years; of your pointing out, when a mere child to your father the pictures in the clouds, of ships and battles, in-cluding the battle of Lake Eric and the form of Perry saving his country's flag in the disabled ship; of the de-votional impress stamped upon your character by a loving mother; of your struggle with the schoolmaster which taught the necessity of disciplining in the affairs of life; of your inherited love for children and music; of your alert, bright, and vivacious boyhood, mingled with the mischievous but never with the malicious; of your defer ential respect for those of your moth-er's sex; of the romance of your court-ship and happy marriage; of your service under Admiral Farragut in the Gulf squadron as the executive officer of the Mississippi, when you plunged iron shot and shell through the armor of the Confederate ram Manassas; of the sturdy and fearless manner in which you defended your ship against the guns of Port Hudson, and the quiet and orderly manner in which you abandoned her when she sunk, calling for special commendation of your su-periors in their report of the circum-stances; that between wars, Farragut for forty-eight years, and you for thir ty-seven years, devoted yourselves to the study of your profession, and both at the end of a long peace were found fully equipped and ready to give their country splendid services and to raise es to the highest plane

The world stood enthralled and then broke out in loud huzzabs, which can never be silenced, when the electric spark flashed the news over the gobe that on the 1st of May, 1898, your fleet had destroyed in Manila bay the Span ish navy, silencing the forts and tak-ing the Philippine Islands, thus stripping the East of every vestige of Spanish domination. Our republic has no reason to fear a comparison of her sea fighters with those of other nations. The birth of the Republic gave her Paul Jones; the war of freedom of ocean highways gave her Perry, and the war for her morals and integrity gave her Farragut. The Admiral in a brief extemporaneou speech of reply simply thanked the people of the city of New York for the handsom gift. His brief remarks were as follows:

Mr. Mayor-It would be quite impossible for me to express in words how deeply I am moved by this—by all these honors one after the other. This beau-tiful cup, the freedom of the city, this great—magnificent reception. I cannot find words to say what I want to, but speaking for myself and the gallant squadron I had the horor to command at Manila I thank you from the bottom of my heart.

Schley, in the full uniform of a rear ad miral, stood close by the side of Dewey during the presentation and divided the honors with the cheering mass of people, cheer after cheer being given for Schley when he was discovered. The demonstration was a mighty one when Dewey was drawn away in a carriage escorted by Squadron A to take his place miles off at the head of the land celebration, and crush of enthuisasts. Rear Admiral Schlev was everywhere recognized, and the demorstration in his honor today somewhat made up for the apparent slight that had been imposed upon the man who was the cruiser Brooklyn's chief commander at the battle of Santiago. General Miles, too, was there and the patriotic greeting from the multitude in his honor was a most flattering one. The repast served on the Saudy Hook took the place of the breakfast that was originally intended to have been served after the party reached Claremont. On the way up the river the entire party was presented to Admiral Dewey. The Sandy Hook reached Claremont shortly after 10 o'clock much before the waiting crowd had dared to hope that the Admiral would arrive and he was greeted with acclamation from the mighty assemblage of humanity, waiting on the hillside for the parade to start.

An important change was made this aft crnoon in the programme of the parade on the day admiral Dewey will receive his sword. Chairman Moses spent some time at the White House this morning in consultation with the President on the arrangements for the sword presentation and the President said that he desired to show the Admiral every courtesy possible and he hoped that it could be arranged for him to escort the Admiral to the Capitol, so inat the head of the land celebration, and the cheors were equally as mighty when Schley, in a carriage a square behind the Dewey escort, was driven through the McKinley's carriage. He will first be escorted to the Executive Mansion by Chair-man Moses, of the General Committee, where he will find the President, Cabinet, his own staff, and visiting governors awaiting him. The President and the Admiral will leave the Executive Mansion together, followed by the Cabinet; next will come the aides of the Admiral and the President, followed by the visiting governors and in this manner the procession to the Capitol will be formed, the military bodies occupying the places in the line already assigned to them. rowds Flock to the Points of Interest and Fill Hotels.

Washington may not have a million vistors to witness the Dewey celebration, but it was very evident today that there will be many strangers within the gates of the Capital to see Admiral Dewey receive the sword voted him by Congress.

All the forenoon and the afternoon the streets of the ctiy have been thronged with the early arrivals who spent their time viewing the points of interest. Large crowds visited the Treasury and were shown through the vaults. The Washington Monument was also an attraction to several hundred people who came in on the morning trains from Richmond, the Southwest, and Baltimore.

There was a steady stream of visitors to the White House, who contented them-selves with a look into the East Room. A selves with a look into the East Room. A Times reporter who made a tour of the hotels was informed by the managers that nearly every room had been engaged for Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday. And there was every indication that the city would be well filled with strangers. The arrivals today were principally from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, and North Carolins.
